

I am the Head of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery at Hospital General Universitario Gregorio Marañón in Madrid and Professor of Plastic Surgery in Universidad Complutense de Madrid. My work has been focused in microsurgery and regenerative medicine research. In our hospital, as a national referral center, we do perform any type of surgical reconstructions, from head and neck to lower limbs as well as special cases.

This congress will be celebrated in the heart of Europe, and will provide a great chance to the international community of reconstructive microsurgeons to present their works and to discuss the newest perspectives in our surgical field.
