

Christoph Hirche is a Professor of Plastic Surgery and Chair of the Department of Department of Plastic, Hand and Reconstructive Microsurgery, Hand Trauma and Replantation Center (FESSH), BG Unfallklinik Frankfurt am Main gGmbH, which is affiliated to Goethe-University of Frankfurt. He was born in Kiel, Germany, in 1979 and graduated at the Charité University of Berlin in 2006 after stays abroad in the USA (New York, Cincinnati) and Thailand (Phuket). He is a board certified Plastic and Aesthetic Surgeon with strong experience in microsurgery, breast surgery, lymphatic surgery and an experienced Hand Surgeon. He is board member of the German-speaking Society of Microsurgery (GSRM/DAM) as General Secretary. Professor Hirche is an investigator of several studies in experimental and clinical academic research. His major scientific fields of interest are lymphatic imaging and tissue engineering, reconstructive microsurgery, fluorescence guidance in surgery, lymphedema, scaphoid injuries and septic plastic surgery.